Ford aide linked to GO station outburst

Georgetown. Video shows David Price cursing at an employee after missing his train Metrolinx is investigating several incidents at the Georgetown GO station involving David Price, Toronto Mayor Rob Ford's director of operations and logistics, including one in which a transit employee was berated and a door to the station broken.

The incidents involving complaints of Price acting in an abusive manner date back to November 2012 and the provincial transit agency said it will work with police to determine whether criminal or provincial-offences charges are warranted.

"The investigation is currently active and we will be working with the Halton Region police to determine if any charges will be laid in the incident," said Judy Pfeifer, vice-president, strategic communications for Metrolinx. Pfeifer said she was unable to further discuss the matter or identify any of the people involved.

The most recent incident, and the one that sparked the investigation, took place on the morning of Aug. 27 after Price missed the 7:41 train to Union Station, swore at a GO employee and broke one of the station's main doors, according to transit officials. The incident was caught on the video of a witness and station cameras.

Marc Surette, who owns a café inside the station, saw the Aug. 27 incident and said a visibly angry Price yelled at the GO employee on duty after missing his train.

"He told the attendant to f— off.... You can't run around treating people that way because of who you think you are," said Surette, 39.

The attendant would not agree to be interviewed.

Price did not respond to multiple emails and calls concerning the incidents.

A Torstar News Service reporter viewed a witness-shot mobile-phone video of the incident five times and listened to the audio of the video.

The video shows Price, dressed in a dark suit, light shirt and white running shoes, standing in front of the ticket booth inside the station.

"Is there another train at 8:03?" he can be heard asking the attendant behind the counter.

"Yeah, I made that announcement," the GO employee can be heard saying, off camera.

"I was on time, you said I was on time for that one," says Price, referring to the 7:41 train.

"Sir, you were in here at 7:40, less than a minute," the employee says.

After saying something inaudible, Price turns and starts to walk out of the station, at which point the employee says, "Here's your debit receipt, sir, if you want it back."

"Yeah, f— off," Price can be heard saying as his right hand shoves open the station door, causing it to slam into a window ledge. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

More investigations likely, says T.O. housing corp. CEO

'Staff always complain.'

Gene Jones says a forensic investigation into possible financial wrongdoing by a subsidiary will probably be followed by more probes

The Toronto Community Housing Corp. will probably need to launch additional investigations into its own activities when the financial probe Torstar News Service revealed Wednesday is done, chief executive Gene Jones says.

The city-owned public housing agency has hired a forensic accounting firm to study possible document falsification and other possible wrongdoing by a former subsidiary, Housing Services Inc. Forensic accountants are also examining allegations of kickbacks and double-billing announced by Jones in February.

"There may be more subsequent to that. Hopefully not, but I'm pretty sure there will be," Jones told reporters outside a Weston Road TCHC building where Mayor Rob Ford knocked on doors and offered residents help with maintenance needs on Wednesday afternoon.

"This is just not the last of it," Jones said. "There's probably going to be a little bit more, because of some of the things that we've been seeing over the years that have been happening here that we need to make sure that is being done correctly."

Jones would not discuss details of the investigation of Housing Services. He played down the employee complaints that led to a second ongoing investigation Torstar revealed Wednesday, an examination by city ombudsman Fiona Crean of his personnel practices.

Employees have told Crean that Jones has hired and promoted managers without allowing competition for the jobs or following approved personnel policies. Jones refused to say whether that is true.

Mayor Rob Ford, touring a TCHC property at 3101 Weston Ave., chats with resident Helena Bok, who's been there for 10 years. VINCE TALOTTA/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

"Staff always complain about everything," he said. "You guys know, you're in the news media, your staff complains too. We complain about everything. I complain, OK? So we're just going through the process."

Ford said he knows little about the Housing Services investigation.

Ford offered a strong endorsement of Jones, who was hired in 2012 with the mayor's backing. The previous chief executive, Keiko Nakamura, was fired in 2011 in wake of a spending and procurement scandal.

"He's come in, he's cleaned house, he's done what he has to do," Ford said. "I support him 100 per cent. So if people want to take shots at him, I'm going to stick up for him, because I know he's done a good job. He's done the best he can. And he's been efficient at doing it. He hasn't been coming back with his hand out asking for more money all the time."

Pressed about the apparent ongoing problems, Ford said, "We're working on it. That's the mess we inherited."

Ontario to crack down on bad teachers

Education Minister Liz Sandals
TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Teachers convicted of sexual abuse or child pornography won't be allowed back in the classroom for at least five years under new legislation introduced by Education Minister Liz Sandals.

After that time, teachers can apply for licence reinstatement but "it isn't automatic," Sandals told reporters Wednesday afternoon.

"What this does do is give some flexibility for the college (of teachers) to look at the individual circumstances ... and whether there has been rehabilitation. These are very rare cases we're talking about."

Even if teachers found guilty of such an offence by the College of Teachers do get their licence back, that "doesn't mean that any school board is going to look at hiring the teacher because the history is there.

"The fact that you reapply doesn't mean that it will be granted.... If you think of the federal parole board, people will often reapply...and it will be denied."

A guiding hand for the mentally ill

Health care. Finding the right treatment can be a challenge, and the people behind the Family Navigation Project want to help

jessica.smith@metronews.ca

After finding her daughter without vital signs and shuffling her back and forth between detox centres and hospitals in Canada, Fran Carnerie of Whitby finally found the help her child needed in the Utah desert.

She says she never would have found it if she hadn't first found a navigator, a private contractor in the U.S. who understands the mental-health landscape and directed her to the wilderness therapy program that she believes saved her daughter, Sarah Frazackerley.

Carnerie and a group of other parents with similar experiences with the mental-health system are working with Dr. Anthony Levitt to raise at least $5 million to create the Family Navigation Project at Sunnybrook Hospital in Toronto, which would offer that navigation service to Ontario families for free.

On Sunday, they're holding a fundraising run that will help the project get up and running in 2014.

According to Levitt, one of the major problems with the mental-health-care system in Canada is that families often don't know how to access it. "Even if we knew how to access the system, we can't always find the right match. One enters it wherever one can, but it might not be the best place for that person."

The Family Navigation Project would advertise widely with a number for families to call, he said. A navigator would guide families to the right kind of mental-health care — be it public or private — and continue to help them get the right services as they progress through the system.

"Our goal is to help families when they're lost and they feel like they're at the end of their rope," said Levitt.

Why it falls to a non-profit, instead of the provincial government, to run this program has partly to do with the complexities of mental-health care, said Levitt.

While the province runs some services to help families navigate the system — including connexontario, which runs helplines for mental health and drug, alcohol and gambling addictions — the public service tends to only recommend public care and sometimes it's not enough, said Levitt.

For example, families can face years-long wait lists for services that can be purchased in the U.S. or, in some cases, can be covered by insurance, he said. If they wait, their child's condition could deteriorate, or worse.

Levitt isn't trying to get into a debate about public vs. private mental-health care, he said.

"One debate we are really wanting to wade into is, are there gaps in the service in Ontario and Canada, and what are the gaps?" he said. "Our goal is to monitor in real time what are the services available ... and, over time, we'll see where the gaps are. And we believe we have a role in giving that to the government."

He's also hoping that the project's value will become apparent and one day the provincial government will sign on.

"Sometimes the government directs these kinds of projects, and sometimes interested people and families develop them and the government realizes how important they are," he said.

Ripley's Aquarium of Canada. Rare species' journey comes to an end as opening nears

The sea anemones arrived Sunday. On Monday, Andy Dehart planned to spend his afternoon in a tank, one of the cylindrical creatures in each hand, holding them steady on the rocks to encourage them to grab on with their sticky, frond-like tentacles.

"Then they'll move on from there," Dehart says of the slow-moving invertebrates, which look more like plants than the predators they are.

And that, like cleaning the tanks, is one of the more boring underwater interactions that happen in Toronto's new downtown world of sharks, octopuses and eels.

Dehart is the director of husbandry at the soon-to-be opened Ripley's Aquarium of Canada, a job that means something a little different every day. Born in Baltimore, he knew he wanted to do this from the age of four.

He has two young children, but his family has essentially grown by 15,000 when you add in all the alewives, lobsters and sharks.

This past Monday, about two-thirds of his charges were already in the tanks, even as construction continued on the building. An inflatable Earth has been transformed from sagging husk to glorious planet. A cloudy sky is painted above the 2.9-million-litre "Dangerous Reef" tank.

With the opening projected for sometime this fall, the exact date depends on construction progress.

Not much relief for squished commuters

Bit of a wait. It will be 2018 at the earliest before there's more room on the trains

TTC riders crushed onto the Yonge line could be forgiven for rolling their eyes at Wednesday's news: Premier Kathleen Wynne has appointed more advisers to look at how to pay for new transit lines, among them a relief subway into the downtown.

There is no relief in sight for the 500,000 commuters who pack the Yonge-University-Spadina line every day. Six new stops come online in 2016, two years before a new computerized signal system, called automatic train control (ATC), is up and running. The tension between maintaining Toronto's depleted transit system and expanding it to serve new riders isn't new.

Among the plethora of announcements from city hall and Queen's Park, a generation of TTC starvation is seldom mentioned. ATC was at least a decade overdue when it was originally approved in 2007. But it will be 2018 before the $800 million project is complete on the Yonge line, allowing trains to run 90 seconds apart instead of every 2.5 to three minutes, potentially adding 25 per cent capacity to the line.

Maintaining the grid. Planner says influx of commuters a problem

Jennifer Keesmaat, chief planner for the city of Toronto, doesn't argue with the need for transit expansion, only that it has to be done in the context of the network and gaps in the current system.

The influx of commuters to Toronto's downtown core keeps the region prosperous. But you can't expand the system without maintaining what you've already got, she said.

"It's important to note that in the report before council, ... the TTC made it very clear they could only support the building of the Scarborough subway if the downtown relief line was built first," Keesmaat said.

Without it, a Scarborough subway extension would only add bodies to the critical mass of about 400,000 that already pass through Bloor-Yonge Station every day.

About 20,000 riders get on the Yonge line each morning at Finch Station, heading south only, and many of them are York Region commuters. The number is expected to grow to 51,000 by 2031, says Keesmaat.

"It means anyone who lives in the city — forget it, you're not getting on the train," she said. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Government holds key to unmarked Huronia graves

The government has a list of the names of the 2,000 people who died at Huronia Regional Centre, but anyone who wants to see it has to file a freedom of information request.

The Archives of Ontario staff have no obligation to filter records through a FOI request, but rather archivists make a decision on a case-by-case basis.

The resolution to a class-action lawsuit includes a promise to compile a registry of names, but it's not clear if it will be made public.

Former residents of Huronia, a government-run institution in Orillia for the developmentally delayed, recently won a major victory with the settlement to a landmark class-action lawsuit that includes $35-million, a formal apology and a promise to maintain the onsite cemetery.

About 1,440 who died there prior to 1958 were buried in either unmarked graves or with a numbered tombstone.

"The FIPPA legislation does not require the Ontario archivist to ask for a freedom of information request; however, there is also nothing which prevents the archivist from asking for a freedom of information request to evaluate an inquiry," said a spokesperson for Ontario's Information and Privacy Commissioner.

Passengers watch in horror as bus barrels into path of VIA train

Ottawa. Impact kills driver, five passengers as witnesses view it all in disbelief

Passengers aboard a double-decker bus screamed "Stop! Stop!" as the driver plowed through a flashing level crossing and into a passing VIA Rail train Wednesday morning, killing at least six people and injuring many more.

The horrific collision sheared off the front of the bus and knocked the VIA locomotive and one of four passenger cars off the tracks.

Police confirmed six dead, while several area hospitals were flooded by 31 patients, in-

Unforeseen disaster

"We've lost six of our neighbours, people who started off this ... sunny day as we all did, heading from their homes and loved ones to go about their daily lives."

Ottawa Mayor Jim Watson, in a Wednesday afternoon press conference cluding 11 in critical condition.

"People started screaming, 'Stop, stop!' because they could see the train coming down the track," said student Tanner Trepaniere, who was on the upper level of the new, double-decker OC Transpo bus.

"There was a lot of screaming, but then people were actually relatively calm, considering the situation," Trepaniere said of the aftermath.

"He must have lost his brakes," said Pascal Logis, who saw the bus go through the barrier. "Or he had an ... attack or whatever.... He just didn't stop."

"I was just looking around, just watching things happen," said another witness, Mark Cogan, who agreed the barrier was down.

"I just thought maybe there's a side way around or something, but instantly ... he went through the guard rail and just hammered the train and then it was just mayhem."

Ottawa police spokesman

Marc Soucy said officers responded at 8:48 a.m. Rescue crews swarmed over the mangled wreckage as ambulances, fire trucks and police vehicles flooded the scene.

The accident occurred just outside a suburban VIA station in the west end. The train tracks in the area cross both a major city street and a transit line reserved for buses only.

At a press conference, Mayor Jim Watson summed up the shock of the crash and its effect on the community.

"The sorrow that we all feel is deep and I'm sure shared by all residents of Ottawa, and in fact all of Canada," he said.

Investigation

Piecing the facts together

Transit officials gathered evidence and began to piece together what led to the collision Wednesday.

Glen Pilon, lead investigator for the Transportation Safety Board of Canada, said recording equipment could detail the speed the vehicles were travelling, whether they braked and whether they were working properly to determine the cause.

"My personal assessment was that he did not brake," said passenger Gregory Mech, who was on the second level of the bus. "Others said he broke a second before impact."

"We were all thrown forward," he said, "but as the train was going through the crossing it was still moving forward.... We had a left-right shake."

Mech added that a sharp turn before the rail crossing may have been a factor.

"You don't see the crossing until you complete the curve," he said. GRAHAM LANKTREE/METRO IN OTTAWA

Sixth victim

Bus driver a 'very nice guy'

As family and friends mourn the death of five passengers, a Gloucester family is grieving the sixth victim: Bus driver Dave Woodard.

People who know the family said the driver's relatives were traumatized by the news.

Reached by phone, a neighbour expressed disbelief that Woodard was behind the wheel.

"He was a very nice guy," said the woman, who didn't want her name published.

"I was just speaking with him yesterday and it just blew me away when I heard he was the driver."

Woodard had 10 years of experience as an OC Transpo bus driver.

"He was a great neighbour," she said.

"Very personable, would talk to anybody. I'm sure he would give you the shirt off his back if he could."

METRO'S RUNNING TEAM MAKING GREAT STRIDES

We have a running addict among us and his name is Fernando Carneiro. With 30 days left before the Scotiabank Toronto Marathon, he is setting his sights on several running challenges.

"I would love to finish the marathon in three hours and 30 minutes — just 10 minutes away from qualifying for Boston," Carneiro says. "If I can do that, then I plan to aim for three hours and 20 minutes next year."

Jessica Smith conquered her longest run at 29 kilometres. "It was tough, but it left me feeling like I might be able to do 42," she says.

Feeling some knee pain, she wants to strengthen the muscles around her knee.

Teammate Liz Brown can show Smith some moves.

"My knee is feeling much better after rest and doing a few strengthening exercises that Brian, at the Queen's Park Running Room, gave me," Brown says.

Also on the mend, Takara Small resumed running but remains sidelined for the big race.

THE TEAM

- Jessica Smith, 28, reporter/photographer
- Hannah Zitner, 32, online editor
- Fernando Carneiro, 36, national deputy editor
- Liz Brown, 32, editor for movies/travel
- Takara Small, 25, business columnist and online editor

"I'm a little envious of my peers who are excited for the upcoming marathon," she says. "Oh well. There's always next year, right?"

Finally, Hannah Zitner is staying motivated with running buddies.

"Knowing that everyone else in the group will be at the run makes skipping a session a whole lot harder," she says.

Coca-Cola apologizes for 'you retard' cap

'Shocked' Edmonton woman, whose sister is developmentally disabled, discovers 'R-word' on bottle of Vitamin Water

Coca-Cola apologized Wednesday to the family of an Alberta woman who was shocked to unscrew a bottle of the company's Vitamin Water and find the words "you retard" printed inside the cap.

Edmonton-based photographer Blake Loates said she and her husband discovered the cap while out for dinner on Tuesday night.

"We were both pretty shocked," she said.

What makes the situation even more upsetting to Loates is that her younger sister Fiona is living with cerebral palsy and autism, and Loates was taught that the "R-word" is completely unacceptable.

"The R-word is just something we don't say in my family," said Loates. "My dad is quite upset and is on a rampage."

Her father, Doug Loates, who lives in Tacoma, Wash., stayed up all night writing letters to Coca-Cola, looking for an explanation for the offensive cap.

"I am astonished that a major corporation could allow someone to tarnish their brand," he said. "Not everyone in Canada speaks French — like my daughter Blake."

The caps are part of a promotion run by the company, displaying a random English word followed by a random French word. "Retard" in French means lateness or delay.

Rehtaeh Parsons dating ad pulled from Facebook

The use of photos of Rehtaeh Parsons in online dating ads posted on Facebook is upsetting but ultimately an inevitable reality of social media, an expert in Internet and privacy law said Wednesday.

Prof. Robert Currie of Dalhousie University in Halifax said companies are increasingly using automated programs that rip photos from websites, and it was only a matter of time before the now-ubiquitous image of the 17-year-old girl wound up somewhere it shouldn't have.

"This is how technology works and it's another example of how little control anyone has over any image once it gets out into the Internet sphere," said Currie.

"It really seems to me to be an unfortunate accident that is causing a lot of grief and heartbreak to the Parsons family and others who loved this girl and who were disturbed by this case. But it's just the kind of thing that is going to happen."

The ads for ionechat.com featured pictures of Parsons under the heading, "Find Love in Canada! Meet Canadian girls and women for friendship, dating or relationships."

Parsons hanged herself in April and was taken off life support days later. Her family says her death was brought on by months of bullying following an alleged sexual assault.

Facebook apologized for the ads, saying they were a "gross violation" of the company's policies and have been removed. It also said ionechat.com has been banned from advertising on its website.

Greece: Clashes erupt after stabbing

Athens. Neo-Nazi political party Golden Dawn violent act not an isolated incident

Violent clashes broke out in several Greek cities Wednesday after a hip-hop singer described as an anti-fascist activist was stabbed to death by a man who said he belonged to the far-right Golden Dawn party.

More than 75 people were detained.

The death of Pavlos Fyssas, 34, drew condemnation from across Greece's political spectrum and abroad.

While the extremist Golden Dawn has been blamed for numerous violent attacks in the past, the overnight stabbing is the most serious violence so far directly attributed to a member.

Fyssas died in a state hospital early Wednesday after being stabbed twice outside a cafe in the Keratsini area west of Athens.

Police said a 45-year-old man arrested at the scene admitted to attacking Fyssas and said he belonged to Golden Dawn.

A knife with traces of blood was found near his car.

Clashes broke out Wednesday between riot police and thousands of protesters holding anti-fascist demonstrations in Fyssas' memory in Keratsini and another five cities.

U.S. firearms debate. Starbucks says guns not welcome, but not banned

Starbucks has always tried to set itself apart by taking strong positions on progressive political issues. Now that reputation has landed the company in the middle of the heated national debate over gun laws.

On Thursday, the Seattle-based company will run full-page ads in major newspapers, telling customers that guns are no longer welcome in its cafes. But Starbucks is stopping short of an outright ban.

"We are not pro-gun or anti-gun," CEO Howard Schultz said in an interview.

He said he hopes people will honour the request not to bring in guns but says the company will nevertheless serve those who do.

"We will not ask you to leave," he said.

The move comes as the company finds itself at the centre of a fight it didn't start. In recent months, gun control advocates have been pressuring Starbucks to ban firearms, while supporters of gun rights have celebrated the company's decision to defer to local laws. About a month ago, Starbucks shut down a store in Newtown, Conn. early to avoid a demonstration by gun rights advocates. They had planned to stage a "Starbucks Appreciation Day," bringing their firearms and turning the company into an unwitting supporter of gun rights.

But for some, support for firearms runs counter to the Starbucks image. Part of the brand's attraction is the company's liberal views on environmental issues and health-care benefits.

Yet with over 7,000 company-owned stores across the country — in red states and blue — Starbucks is being forced to tread carefully with its special blend of politics and commerce.

Richmond, Virginia

Facebook 'like' is free speech, U.S. appeal court rules

Clicking "Like" on Facebook is constitutionally protected free speech and can be considered the 21st century equivalent of a campaign yard sign, a federal appeals court ruled Wednesday.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond reversed a lower court ruling that said merely "liking" a Facebook page was insufficient speech to merit constitutional protection.

Exactly what a "like" means — if anything — played a part in a Virginia case involving six people who say Hampton Sheriff B.J. Roberts fired them for supporting an opponent in his 2009 re-election bid, which he won. The workers sued, saying their First Amendment rights were violated.

The ruling protects free speech regardless of venue, whether a sentiment is expressed in the physical world or online.

France's pretty little girls may be denied a stage

Move to ban beauty pageants for children.

After all, there are no mini-Mr. contests, lawmaker says

France's Senate has voted to ban beauty pageants for children under 16, in an effort to protect girls from being sexualized too early.

Anyone who enters a child into such a contest would face up to two years in prison and 30,000 euros in fines. A pageant organizer lamented that the move was too severe.

The Senate approved the measure 197-146 overnight, as an amendment to a law on women's rights. The legislation must go to the lower house of parliament for further debate and another vote.

"At this age, you need to concentrate on acquiring knowledge. Yet with mini-Miss competitions and other demonstrations, we are fixing the projectors on their physical appearance," said conservative lawmaker Chantal Jouanno, who authored the amendment.

Britain. Pragmatic ruling brings compromise to heated religious debate

In Britain this week, a judge struck a blow for religious freedom. Or for secularism. It depends on whom you ask.

Judge Peter Murphy ruled that a female Muslim defendant may stand trial wearing a face-covering veil — but must remove it when giving evidence. The compromise ruling had some insisting it backs a woman's religious right to wear the veil, and others saying it shows British justice remains independent and won't bow to religious demands.

The case has reignited a debate about Muslim veils that has flared across Europe, sparking protests and exacerbating religious tensions in several countries. Those ten-

Gunman visited hospital weeks before rampage

Navy Yard shooting. Aaron Alexis wasn't stripped of security clearance despite his mental illness

The Washington Navy Yard gunman visited two hospitals in the weeks before the rampage but did not say he was depressed or having thoughts of harming himself or others, the Veterans Affairs Department said Wednesday.

Aaron Alexis, a former Navy reservist who killed 12 people Monday before being slain in a police shootout, complained of insomnia during an Aug. 23 emergency room visit at the VA Medical Center in Providence, R.I. He was given sleep medication and was advised to follow up with a doctor.

He made a similar visit five days later to the VA hospital in Washington, when he again complained of not being able to sleep because of his schedule. His medication was refilled.

Law enforcement officials have said the 34-year-old man was grappling with paranoia, hearing voices and convinced he was being followed.

Two weeks before his ER visit, he complained to police in Rhode Island that people were talking to him through the walls of his hotel room and sending microwave vibrations into his body to deprive him of sleep. Newport police alerted the naval station, and they did not hear from him again.

Meanwhile, Alexis's mother said Wednesday she does not know why her son opened fire at the Navy Yard.

"Aaron is now in a place where he can no longer do harm to anyone, and for that I am glad," Cathleen Alexis said. "To the families of the victims, I am so very sorry that this has happened. My heart is broken."

Egypt's ousted president, Mohammed Morsi, told his wife and children he is in good health in his first conversation with his family since the military removed him from office and detained him in a secret location more than two months ago, one of his lawyers said Wednesday.

The phone calls were an apparent gesture by the military as authorities prepare to put Morsi on trial on charges of

China no stranger to sharing space

China is willing to open its future space station to foreign astronauts and even train them for such missions, a Chinese astronaut said.

China's first man in space, Yang Liwei, was quoted by the official China Daily newspaper on Wednesday as saying China had

"We would like to train astronauts from other countries and organizations that have such a demand, and we would be glad to provide trips to foreign astronauts," said Yang.

The Emperor's old toothbrush

another member of the imperial family.

The ivory handle has little holes once stuffed with boars' hair bristles and is inscribed with "His Majesty, the Emperor of Brazil," in French. It's among dozens of items bearing the names or titles of Brazil's royal family, including a jar once containing the queen's toothpaste.

The objects were unearthed on land near the former imperial palace.

Climate debate heats up in Washington

Keystone XL. U.S. environmentalists plan 'Draw the Line' rallies this weekend in national day of action

U.S. President Barack Obama's sweeping climate agenda was in the spotlight on Capitol Hill on Wednesday with his two newly appointed environmental czars chiding those who doubt the existence of climate change as congressional wrangling over TransCanada's Keystone XL pipeline raged on.

"The increase in the quantities of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere as a result of human activity, above all the combustion of fossil fuels, has reached the point that it is profoundly affecting the climate," Energy Secretary Ernest Moniz told a hearing of the energy and commerce committee at the House of Representatives.

Questions from lawmakers to Moniz and his colleague, Gina McCarthy, head of the powerful Environmental Protection Agency, focused on upcoming greenhouse gas emissions standards for existing power plants — regulations that opponents say will have a devastating economic impact on coal-producing states.

Keystone XL wasn't immediately a subject of discussion at the House hearing on Wednesday, possibly because both McCarthy and Moniz have steered clear on weighing in on the merits of the pipeline. But outside the hearing, Eric Cantor, the majority leader of the House of Representatives, told the media that Republican House leaders plan to advance Keystone XL by inserting a resolution into legislation to raise the U.S. debt ceiling — the latest attempt to force the White House into green-lighting the project by attaching pro-pipeline language to bigger bills.

Trapped 16 days in well. Woman says she survived on corn and rainwater

A woman stranded for 16 days in an abandoned well in central China said Wednesday she shouted for help every day and began to lose hope, but managed to survive on raw corn and rainwater.

Su Qixiu, 48, was gathering herbs when she fell into the four-meter-deep well in a village in Henan province on Sept. 1. Her husband and children searched for her without success, but she was finally found Monday by a passerby, state media reported.

"I shouted every day in those 16 days. And spoke a lot of nonsense. I was scared and felt hopeless," said Su, speaking slowly and weakly from her hospital bed.

Su said she lost around 15 kilograms and now weighed around 40-45 kilograms. Her doctor said that Su at first was unable to speak and had organ failure, but that her condition had stabilized.

Make our senses sizzle

The seventh global Metro photo contest is calling on photographers to stimulate our judges' senses. This year's theme is the five senses, plus one. Photographers are invited to submit photos that illustrate each category — sight, sound, hearing, touch, taste and the sixth sense. A winner in each category will be chosen from participating countries with a global winner chosen from those photos. Among those top six photos, a grand prize winner will receive a six-day trip to Ghana with Reach for Change. Local winners, plus an overall winner for Canada, will be announced in the newspaper.

Submit photos at metrophotochallenge.com before Oct. 13, 2013

Sight: Jeanne Beker

Canadian fashion icon Jeanne Beker says her background as a mime artist taught her a picture is worth a thousand words. A photo that portrays spontaneity, elegance, drama, sensuality and charm will impress her. "I adore a photograph that tells or suggests an intriguing story," she said. "I especially love portraits, and the synergy between photographer and subject that can relate in a masterful shot," she said. Beker's career in fashion journalism, including as host of Fashion Television, has given her access to the world's greatest photographers.

Smell: Barb Stegemann

Businesswoman Barb Stegemann will judge the scent category of our contest not with her nose, but with her gut. "I think I will find scent in a photo by going with my gut reaction," she said. "I will then close my eyes and think a bit and come back to it. That is my process with most things." Stegemann is the CEO of 7 Virtues, a perfume company that sources essential oils from legal crops in Afghanistan to provide farmers an alternative to illegal poppy crops. Her favourite scent is the Afghan orange blossom. "The scent can carry you away to what is good about a place and gives us a new way to honour the heritage and culture."

Taste: John Jackson and Connie DeSousa

Co-owners and co-executive chefs of Calgary's CHARCUT Roast House, John Jackson and Connie DeSousa, know what kind of photo makes you salivate. "If it's a roast chicken the skin needs to be golden brown and crisp to the eye with a warm steam lifting from it and drips of juice dripping down the side," said Jackson. "Through our experiences working with such a great variety of food and being able to experiment over our careers with different flavour combinations, I think we have a good idea of what things would be delicious just by looking at the combination of ingredients in a photo," he said.

Touch: Maria Franke

Maria Franke, the curator of mammals for the Toronto Zoo, is one of the few people who have touched a panda. And she knows that in the animal kingdom, things don't always feel like they look. "Their hair is actually quite coarse," she said. "Everyone thinks they look like a plush little panda — and they do look like that — but they're not as soft." Franke will use that experience to judge how well the sense of touch is conveyed in the photos. "A lot of people have misconceptions — they'll think snakes are slimy, when they're not. They're skin is really, really soft and smooth." When it comes to art, she likes simple, but wowing.

Hearing: Nonna Aroutiounian

Clarinetist Nonna Aroutiounian understands how music can evoke colour and texture in your mind. So, she's hoping the photos she judges will transcend the literal representations of sound — a photo of clarinet or French horn, for example — and make her hear something wonderful. "From my experience, music is not just an audible thing. A lot of people experience music in colour — musicians translate how they're going to play by the colour they get when they hear sound," she said. Aroutiounian is an orchestral musician who has played all over the world, an arts manager and an entrepreneur, having recently co-founded the Toronto Pop-Up Orchestra.

The sixth sense: Douglas Coupland

Author and artist Douglas Coupland believes in the "sixth sense," and he'll recognize it in a photo. "There is obviously something out there. I don't know how or why it works, but we've all felt it and we all know it's real. That's the sixth sense," he said. He doesn't want a photo that just documents its subject, which, he said, would be merely "Instagram fodder." "A photo that works in 2013 has to stir your soul without being coy, manipulative, schmaltzy, cheesy, cliché, or a photo that tries to emulate someone else's photo. Success isn't about virality; it's about capturing something strong and real and eternal."

Road trip through beautiful ... N. Korea?

Historic ride.

Motorcyclist Gareth Morgan and four others journeyed through the reclusive nation and were treated like royalty

KIERON MONKS

Metro World News in London

Best known for gulags, dictatorship and secrecy, the "Hermit Kingdom" is not an obvious choice for a road trip. But those warning signs served as motivation for New Zealander Gareth Morgan, who has completed the first pan-Korean motorcycle ride with his wife and friends.

"I've been working on it since 2006," said the 60-year-old adventurer by Skype from South Korea, recounting the marathon of bureaucracy he endured to make the four-week trip happen.

While planning a round-the-world ride, Morgan met with a North Korean friendship society in New Zealand, which obtained an invitation to Pyongyang to go and pitch to government officials.

"I told them I wanted to ride the mountain range that is the backbone of the Korean peninsula and remind the world about the one-third of the Korean population that live in the North."

Over several years a route was agreed on with the co-operation of South Korea and the UN, including a historic agreement to allow the five riders through the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) that has separated the Koreas for 60 years.

When the riders were finally allowed to travel, North Korean security confiscated their passports.

"They said, 'You don't have to go through customs — you're special,'" recalled Morgan.

Set free on the route hugging the Baekdudaegan mountain range, Morgan was "blown away" by the difference between rumour and reality.

"We always hear about extreme poverty, but there is only famine if the crops fail and this year the harvest was good. The villages were in good shape and the people were well dressed.... We were definitely the scruffiest people around."

While the riders had a security escort, they were allowed to mingle with locals. They were invited to a beach party and enjoyed a 13-course meal usually reserved for the highest rank of VIP.

"The message I was getting was that they didn't want isolation, and hoped it would be better for their children. They are terrified that the U.S. could invade at any minute as they are always hearing about military exercises on the border."

The party stopped at the DMZ, where poor planning almost caused disaster.

"The crossing had no vehicle access on the southern side so they had to change the plan. The North Koreans went crazy because they had to get new permissions for a different area. They worked all day on a public holiday to pull it off."

Once the riders were finally ready to leave North Korean land, "it was quite an emotional goodbye," Morgan said.

"But when we reached the crossing, there were U.S. soldiers who welcomed us warmly and said, 'We didn't think this had a hope in hell.'"

Sinclair gets a kick out of star treatment

Bend it like a champ.
Canada's free-kick queen to be honoured on Walk of Fame

The accolades have poured in since Christine Sinclair's stirring performance at the 2012 London Olympics, but now Canada's top female soccer player will really be a star.

The Canadian team captain who held the country spellbound as she scored three times against the powerhouse United States in the Olympic soccer semi-finals, and then made an impassioned denunciation of some questionable refereeing, is to be honoured with a star on Canada's Walk of Fame.

The 30-year-old from Burnaby, B.C., will be inducted during the Walk of Fame festival in Toronto on Saturday. The ceremony will be shown on Global TV on Oct. 27.

"This is one thing that has definitely not sunk in,"

That takes balls

- Sinclair is by far Canada's most prolific scorer, with 145 career international goals. That ranks third all-time behind Americans Abby Wambach and Mia Hamm.

Sinclair said in a recent interview.

"I can't imagine it."

Trudeau recruits a former army commander

Star recruit. Andrew Leslie will co-chair an advisory council on international affairs for the Liberal leader

Justin Trudeau has begun showcasing a new Liberal team, with some surprise stars emerging.

Retired general Andrew Leslie, former commander of Canadian army, is the latest recruit. He has agreed to co-chair an advisory council on international affairs for the Liberal leader and is not ruling out running for the party in the 2015 election.

More big names — primarily people previously not associated with the Liberal party — are expected to be added to the team, in various capacities, over the coming weeks.

Gen. Andrew Leslie in 2008.
BILL GRAVELAND/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Behind the scenes, Trudeau's operatives have been putting emphasis on candidate recruitment, in a bid to infuse the party with fresh blood and demonstrate the leader's ability to reach outside the traditional Liberal base. They are also hoping to compensate for Trudeau's lack of experience by surrounding him with a team that boasts expertise in areas in which he may be perceived to be weak, such as economy and foreign affairs.

"We will continue to draw in extraordinary people onto the Liberal team," Trudeau said Wednesday after announcing Leslie's appointment.

After 35 years in uniform, Leslie said his decision to join the Liberals came abruptly a few weeks ago, when news first leaked about the Quebec government's proposed charter of values, which would ban public servants from wearing any conspicuous religious symbols.

Wildlife

Walrus safety top of mind in Alaska

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is taking steps to protect hundreds of walrus that have gathered on Alaska's northwest coast.

Spokeswoman Andrea Medeiros said Wednesday that the agency has begun its protocol to prevent stampedes among the animals that gather in close quarters on remote Arctic beaches. The measures include limiting flights in the area and warning nearby villages to avoid walrus herds.

The World Wildlife Fund, using photographs taken Saturday by federal scientists, estimates 2,000 to 4,000 walrus have come ashore on a beach near Point Lay, an Inupiat Eskimo community 1,120 kilometres northwest of Anchorage.

If panicked by an airplane, a human hunter or a polar bear, walrus can stampede for the ocean, crushing pups.

PQ: No quick compromise on values plan

Charter controversy.
Minister says debate
is 'too important'
to Quebecers, could continue for 'weeks'

Quoted

"It's time to have the guts to decide for real."

International Relations Minister
Jean-François Lisée

The Parti Québécois government appears to be digging in its heels on its controversial religion plan and preparing for an extended debate.

Statements from ministers
Wednesday suggest the PQ
has no intention of watering down the plan for speedy passage in the current minority legislature.

One day after a minister expressed a willingness to "improve" the charter, the government suggested changes would be minor and would not dilute its basic elements.

While the third party in the legislature is offering to negotiate a deal on a bill, the minister spearheading the proposed Charter of Values says he prefers to put it to Quebecers.

A website set up for the proposed rules has already received 10,000 comments and Bernard Drainville, the minister responsible for democratic reforms, told a news conference the debate could continue for many "weeks."

He welcomed the Coalition party's offer but Drainville said he didn't want to upset the public.

"It's a debate that's too important," Drainville said on Wednesday. "We have to leave Quebecers the time.
These are their values."

Since the charter appears stalled in its current form, in the present minority legislature, the PQ appears to have two basic options: strip it down to pass it quickly, or preserve it for possible use later as an election promise.
The PQ expressed little eagerness Wednesday to pass it quickly.

Pro-rape chant

UBC society to donate $250K for counselling, education

The University of British Columbia says the undergraduate society at the centre of a pro-rape chant has pledged to contribute $250,000 for sexual-abuse counselling and education for students.

The university released a report Wednesday about the incident, saying student leaders of the Commerce Undergraduate Society will be held accountable because they did nothing to stop the offensive chant heard by most first-year business students.

The song students sang on a bus spelled out the word "young" with the lyrics, "Y is for your sister ... U is for underage, N is for no consent."

University President Stephen Toope said the entire UBC community must embark on complete and lasting change that will make such chants unacceptable. THE CANADIAN PRESS

How to save over $1,000 on car insurance

Making a few changes could save drivers hundreds, even thousands.

Car insurance is mandatory for all drivers, but overpaying is not. Most drivers are looking to reduce their insurance premiums; fortunately, there are many ways that Canadian drivers can save on their car insurance. Renewal time is a great time to find savings, but it is not the only time. You can find savings at any point with many insurance companies – and the savings could far outweigh any cancellation costs. Read through these top tips to learn how to save over $1,000 on car insurance.

Shop around for car insurance quotes – just like the title says, shop around. Pay far less than currently paying with the existing car insurance company. Each insurance company charges different rates to insure the same driver, with the same driving record and the same company. It's important to check out all options before renewing or at any point during the year. The most common ways to shop around for insurance quotes is to either call each insurance company or shop online for quotes. Online quoting sites like InsuranceHotline.com will provide the lowest rate available, compared against over 30 insurance companies.

Look for discounts on insurance policy –

there are many discounts available. To name a few: Installing winter tires or anti-theft devices and good driver discounts. Ask the insurance company for a list of available discounts and apply the applicable discounts to the policy for extra savings. Many drivers are unaware that discounts exist, so be sure to take full advantage of these.

Increase the deductible – by increasing deductibles, especially on collision coverage, drivers typically see a lower insurance rate. Some drivers are afraid to increase their deductible, as they will have to pay more up-front in the event of an at-fault car accident; but, the deductible is paid only in an at-fault accident. If driving without an at-fault accident for a few years, the cost of the increased premium will have been saved with a lower deductible.

Other ways to save – for even more savings, combine home and car insurance policies with the same insurance company. Many insurance companies offer up to 10% off premiums the two policies are bundled. Also ask the insurance company if there is a discount for paying the premium in full instead of monthly. Commute distance also affects insurance rates. In most cases, not significantly, but each factor can add up to a higher rate. Take a look at the daily commute and if convenient, try taking public transportation, subway, or even carpooling.

These tips should help drivers should see a lower car insurance premium.

Say Beep Beep to cheap cheap.

Get cheap car insurance rates today by visiting InsuranceHotline.com. Compare insurance quotes from over 30 insurance companies and save hundreds, even thousands.

Low-key launch. BlackBerry's new phone has 5-inch screen

BlackBerry, amid minimal fanfare, unveiled another new smartphone on Wednesday, this time with a bigger screen that appears designed to attract users who want a midpoint device between a phone and tablet.

But the launch was largely overshadowed by the latest developments at its competitors and reports that the company is planning to deliver another round of major layoffs.

It's the latest setback for the company, which has been trying to regain ground in the technology market even as consumers seem to be increasingly losing interest in the brand.

Apple, Samsung and other rivals continue to release new versions of their devices alongside a growing number of players in the tablet market.

The new BlackBerry Z30 comes with a five-inch screen, improved battery life and a Major layoffs ahead?

- BlackBerry could lay off as many as 5,000 employees in the coming months in an effort to return the smartphone maker to profitability, according to a media report.
- The Wall Street Journal says executives are preparing to reduce the company's staff by as much as 40 per cent before the end of the year, citing people familiar with the matter.

TAKE GUESSING OUT OF THE GAME

Hockey's off-season is over! What a terrible couple of weeks that was.

Without the lifeblood of hockey coursing through my veins, I was forced to have awkward conversations with friends about topics I'm not actually interested in, such as their friendship. But now that the Zamboni has had time to flood the ice not once but twice and the Chicago Blackhawks victory parade has almost wrapped up, we can drop the puck again.

The new season has many storylines that will unfold on TV screens just over my first dates' shoulders this winter, so here's a look at my predictions for the 2013-14 NHL season:

Boston Bruins forward Patrice Bergeron, who fought last playoffs through a separated shoulder, broken rib, torn rib cartilage, and a face that looked like it had been mulched, all in a losing cause, will produce a series of "For The Love Of The Game" youth recruitment videos, causing Canadian enrolment to plummet.

The Phoenix Coyotes will celebrate their 1,000th customer. Florida Panthers goalie and Tea Partier Tim Thomas will once

HE SAYS

John Mazerolle

metronews.ca

again find himself in hot water politically, when a 1983 photo surfaces showing him shaking hands with Cuban communist revolutionary Fidel Castro.

The New York Islanders, hit by years of budget constraints, will send pink slips to all their left-handed shots. Management will promise to do "more with less."

Vancouver Canucks coach John Tortorella will show a new, softer side by letting reporters finish their questions before politely explaining that their questions are stupid and they should consider another line of work, like base jumping.

This year's outdoor games (23 in all) will remind fans of a gentler, simpler time when games were played outside at an inconvenient distance for $400 a ticket.

Newly acquired Dallas Stars forward Tyler Seguin, infamous for his partying, will run afoul of management when he's caught with an escort near the left face-off dot at the 13-minute mark of the third period.

In a hilarious gaffe that will be replayed on all of the highlight shows, a Raleigh man will accidentally pay full price for a Carolina Hurricanes ticket.

Pittsburgh Penguins superstar Sidney Crosby will transform from a whiny diver who thinks nothing of cheating and makes fans sick, to a feisty acrobat who will do anything to win and makes Canadians' hearts swell with pride, from Feb. 7 to 23 inclusive. Fans will have no explanation for the change.

The amount of hits to the head will be reduced thanks to a league-wide focus on each team's biggest players punishing transgressors by hitting them multiple times in the head.

Longtime Ottawa Senators forward Daniel Alfredsson will reveal in his first visit to the nation's capital as a member of the Detroit Red Wings, that HE WAS A SENATOR ALL ALONG, hitting Red Wings coach Mike Babcock with a folded-up metal chair before side-suplexing the entire Red Wings roster, then tearing his Red Wings sweater off to reveal the Sens logo beneath, with his face under the helmet.

The NHL Network's new Gary Bettman Isocam will capture each thrown projectile and hurled insult at every game the commissioner attends (four in all).

The Toronto Maple Leafs will win the Stanley Cup.

My selfie... inside a glacier

JONATHAN TUCKER/SOLENT NEWS

Enter the azure world of a glacier

A brave photographer risked his life venturing into a cave below a glacier to capture this self-portrait, in a frozen world akin to an ice age. Jonathan Tucker trudged through swamps and up a mountain for more than two hours to reach Mendenhall Glacier near Juneau, Alaska, 1,550 metres above sea level. The glacier is a staggering 21.9 kilometres in length. METRO

Photographer's view

"The glacier is constantly melting, so you never know if the cave will collapse at any minute. It took my breath away. It was terrifying."

Jonathan Tucker, 27, landscape photographer from Whitehorse, Yukon

Ice caves

- Caves form as a glacier moves over a disorder in the ground surface and it detaches itself from the floor. The base layer reconnects with the ground layer, forming striations, thin parallel lines made up of sediment, which refreezes to the base of the glacier.
- Eisriesenwelt, in Austria, is 42 km long — the longest ice cave in the world.

Claustrophobia? Not a problem

Locals had warned Tucker that the water inside the cave was so cold he would have survived for just 10 minutes if he fell in. The landscape photographer said: "I felt very claustrophobic at the beginning but it started to pass as I was taking photos. However, I then heard a crack or movement of the glacier above me, which sounded like I was in the clouds in a thunderstorm." METRO

From mapping the mysteries of the mind to discovering the science of sex, there's no shortage of podcasts promoting science for the non-scientists. So rejoice, just because you don't have a PhD in molecular physics, doesn't mean you can't marvel at the mind-boggling universe. Give these three programs a listen:

Neuropod:

From the history of hypnosis to Alzheimer's origins, this podcast, found on nature.com, breaks down the science in our noggins. No background in neurology needed.

Star Talk:

Internet famous Neil deGrasse Tyson, pictured, keeps science cool by tapping into celebs for his (nearly) weekly podcast. Despite the name, Tyson doesn't just talk space — he also explores the science of "doing it."

RadioLab:

Covering a wide-range of topics from the history of the Heimlich manoeuvre to stories about the science of speed, the well-loved podcast frequently tops the "must listen" lists.

Don't scoff, head down to BOFF

Toronto events. Bloor Ossington Folk Festival at Christie Pits expands as it enters third year of entertaining the Bloordale 'hood

Walking in the door to Saving Gigi, the stacks of records to the right of the cashier are the first sign that there's more than meets the eye to this west-end coffee shop.

The brainchild of Kristjan Harris and Amelia Laidlaw, Gigi, says Harris, was modelled after European-style cafés and bars, "where people can come and talk about ideas."

One such idea incubated in the space was this weekend's Bloor Ossington Folk Festival, a three-day, family oriented event in nearby Christie Pits Park. Spearheaded by Harris, Laidlaw and Roberto Granados-Ocon, the fest features an impressive lineup of more than 40 bands. Best of all, the entire thing is free.

BOFF is an ambitious feat for café owners. But Harris and Laidlaw aren't your average small business people. Saving Gigi opened four years ago after the couple saw a lack of options in their Bloordale neighbourhood.

"There was nothing going on," says Harris. "We were going to have to create something (for people) to come to."

Within months of opening, they had an Internet radio station running out of the shop, streaming music from Gigi's turntables during the day with local DJs spinning into the night.

"That got us into the music scene and hooked us up with a lot of musicians."

The first BOFF was conceived of as a community yard sale and then morphed into a backyard music festival before finally taking shape as a multi-venue event.

Now in its third year, many of the bands on the bill were culled from the organizers' extended network of friends and acquaintances.

Creative people by nature, marrying their work with their hobbies is second nature to the couple.

"We're both hyperactive. When we get down time, we think of a new project," says Laidlaw.

"If we were going to be getting ourselves into the business world, we wanted to have a creative outlet."

The Bloor Ossington Folk Festival runs Sept. 20 to 22 at Christie Pits Park.

How will the cards fall on Emmy night?

Predictions. It's a historic year in the world of TV awards, with House of Cards the first online show to nab a nomination

Emmy Awards crystal-ball gazing was so much easier in the old days, circa the last few years: ABC's Modern Family would be honoured as best comedy series and a cable show, Homeland or Mad Men or such, would win best drama.

Modern Family may earn its fourth consecutive trophy at Sunday's ceremony. But the drama picture is murkier because of Netflix's House of Cards, the first online program to be nominated for top series honours under a 2007 Emmy rule allowing digital contenders.

"We didn't believe it would take as long as six years-plus for the world to start looking to this new explosion of original content," said Rob

Barnett, who moved his career from cable (MTV, VH1) to online as founder and CEO of My Damn Channel. "But it's clearly happening."

Whether House of Cards will actually claim the trophy is another matter. It took more than a decade before a cable show, HBO's Sex and the City, prevailed as a top series winner; in an impatient world, might House of Cards compress the time frame?

Or it is possible that astute Emmy voters smacked their foreheads, realized they had yet to crown AMC's Breaking Bad as TV's best drama and made a m e n d s ?

Kevin Spacey brought some big screen swag to House of Cards. CONTRIBUTED

They should have, we say in unison. Here are some predictions for the 8 p.m. EDT ceremony on CBS hosted by Neil Patrick Harris — who, no Ouija board needed, will be reliably outstanding.

Drama series

Should win: Breaking Bad. It's at the height of its power, and Walter White knows where you live.

Will win: House of Cards. Ambitious politician trumps ambitious drug dealer in Washington-bedazzled Hollywood.

Comedy series

Should win: Louie. Life can be brutal, but also brutally funny in Louis C.K.'s hands.

Will win: Modern Family. It's comfortably amusing and academy voters like it, they really like it.

Actor, drama series

Should win: Jon Hamm, Mad Men. Don Draper finally confronts his pain and what he's done to others. Hamm's trophy is even more overdue.

Will win: Kevin Spacey, House of Cards. Take that, movies! TV is better than ever, and honouring a visiting big-screen star drives the point home.

Actress, drama series

Should win: Kerry Washington, Scandal. She offers a powerhouse performance that keeps the madcap series spinning but not out of control.

Will win: Kerry Washington, Scandal. Don't overthink what will be an unprecedented African-American victory; she simply deserves it.

Supporting actor, drama series

Should win: Bobby Cannavale, Boardwalk Empire. Of course he can bring a fresh spin to a gangster role; what can't this actor do?

Will win: Aaron Paul, Breaking Bad. His character's vulnerability is habit-forming, and he's poised for his third consecutive win.

Supporting actress, drama series

Should win: Christina Hendricks, Mad Men. When the going got tougher so did her character, and Hendricks soared.

Will win: Anna Gunn, Breaking Bad. It's the embattled Mrs. White's turn to shine.

Actor, comedy series

Should win: Don Cheadle, House of Lies. There was a reason for his upset Golden Globe victory over Alec Baldwin and other past winners.

Will win: Louis C.K., who made the sad clown irresistible.

Actress, comedy series

Should win: Laura Dern, Enlightened. If you're looking for layered humanity in any character, she's your woman.

Will win: Julia Louis-Dreyfus, Veep. She wears power and the lunacy of ambition well. Elaine who?

Killing time is over

Dexter. As the series draws to a close, Michael C. Hall reflects on his complex character and what the future holds Dexter Morgan's life seemed well-ordered at first glance, including the serial killer thing. That turned out to be unsustainable.

As Dexter reaches its finale, to air on Showtime Sunday at 9 p.m. Eastern, the character portrayed by actor Michael C. Hall is no longer strictly ruled by the code set down by his adoptive father upon noticing his son craved killing. Dexter was told only to murder people who are proven killers themselves and likely to kill again, and to thoroughly cover his tracks. The narrative device made it possible for viewers to tolerate, even like, someone who did reprehensible things.

"He's so far from anything

I experienced him to be at the beginning," Hall said over lunch, a few weeks after filming the 96th and final episode of the series that began in 2006.

"He's the same character, but he's in many ways a different person," Hall said. "He had successfully compartmentalized efficient killing and convinced himself that he is, in fact, incapable of authentic human emotion when we first met him. But that all falls apart, slowly but surely."

Without the writers providing challenges, Dexter ran the risk of becoming an unimaginative murder-of-the-week procedural. Dexter's boundaries were most severely tested at the end of the fourth season when his wife, Rita, was killed and in season six when his half-sister, Debra (real life ex-wife Jennifer Carpenter), saw him knifing someone in the chest.

"I've always thought that it was more interesting to challenge the audience's affection for the character and to move him into choppy waters," Hall said.

He can appreciate people who say they like his work in Dexter. People who say they like Dexter is something else entirely, although Hall has his theories about those fans.

"We live in a world where we have an increasing sense that we're not in control ... and Dexter, in his micro way, controls his universe and that is very appealing to some people," he said. "We all have a sense of injustice in the world, and Dexter is certainly exacting some form of justice within the confines of his own."

Of course, he said, "maybe it's not that deep. Maybe people have murderous impulses they don't act upon and enjoy watching somebody who gets away with it."

Dexter is going out strong. Ratings are higher during the current eighth and last season than they've ever been. That's a familiar pattern for many critically-acclaimed cable series that see their audiences grow as new fans

Michael C. Hall says he will miss the decisiveness of his character Dexter. CONTRIBUTED discover the stories and binge on them while the show is on hiatus.

The series was pivotal to Showtime's development, said Matthew Blank, the network's chief executive. "It really felt like this is what Showtime should be," he said. Homeland and Ray Donovan may not have existed without its example.

Showtime will look for ways to keep the character alive even after Dexter ends, Blank said. He wasn't clear on how that would happen.

Hall, 42, is measured in how he makes sure to say nothing revealing in advance about the finale. ("Some people will be happy with it, some people will be troubled by it," he said.

"Perhaps some people will be a combination of those things.")

He will miss certain things about playing Dexter. The character was decisive and didn't hesitate to take action, even at times of extreme stress and even when that action was morally questionable. He's looking forward to portraying people whose emotions are not stunted or buried.

Best mistake he ever made

Many fellow actors and friends told Hall he was making a mistake when he took the role of Dexter. A show about a serial killer? Who'd want to watch that? "I've certainly had the thought that I should quit while I was well ahead," he said. "When Six Feet Under ended, I imagined I would never do another television series, just because I thought it would be impossible that I would be so lucky that I would find something as successful."

Breakin' hearts and stealin' fans, one song at a time

New album. Chris Young — who is setting sights on playing his own headlining tour — satisfied with reaction to new single Aw Naw

Chris Young was nervous about his new single Aw Naw.

The 28-year-old Tennessee native releases his new album A.M. this week after a string of No. 1 hits. He wasn't sure how Aw Naw would fit in that line of singles because it was so different from what he's done over his previous three albums.

"It's working at radio, it's doing what it's supposed to do," Young said. "It's downloading and it's hopefully going to help move a lot of records. ... It's definitely a shot in the arm to my live show."

Traditional country fans have embraced Young's deep voice and songwriting, and he's mostly focused on crooning love ballads so far. But the new party single mixes in double electric guitars and stronger drumbeats for a sound that can fill arenas — something he's been studying out on the road as an opening act.

"We did some stuff sonically, mastering-wise that's a little bit different than anything I have done before and there's more tempo on this record, as evidenced by the first single," Young said.

"It's more a snapshot of what my live show is than any record that I think I have done."

Young had a brief hospitalization in August for a leg infection, but he's recovered and returned to the stage. Touring alongside Brad Paisley has Young already thinking about what he would do on his own headlining tour. While he's done some headlining shows, he's still working on building a fan base that can support a large headlining tour.

"Yeah there is that added pressure of, 'it doesn't sell, it's on you,'" Young said. "That's the fun part, too. Eventually you've got to put it out there and build the hard-ticket market. That's just the next step."

Meanwhile, he's happy to get the exposure to Paisley's huge and passionate fan base.

Washington bridges 18-year gap

Emmys. The Scandal star is the first black actress to be nominated in the lead-actress-in-a-drama category since 1995

Before celebrating the Emmys, Kerry Washington and other TV insiders took a moment to toast diversity.

Washington was among the honorees at a pre-Emmy reception hosted Tuesday night by the television academy and the SAG-AFTRA actors union. The academy's headquarters in North Hollywood were transformed into a jet-setting soiree complete with 1960s-era furniture and mid-century modern wall sculptures.

Washington, who is up for the outstanding lead actress in a drama series trophy for Scandal at Sunday's ceremony, is the first black actress in nearly two decades to be nominated in the category since Cicely Tyson was nominated in 1995 for Sweet Justice. She was joined at Tuesday's affair by her Scandal co-stars Joe Morton and Dan Bucatinsky, who nabbed the outstanding guest actor in a drama Emmy at Saturday's Creative Arts Emmys.

"We all know what the Emmys mean," said Jason

George, the Grey's Anatomy and Mistresses actor who serves as the chair of SAG-AFTRA's diversity advisory committee. "They are the aspiration for all actors who work in this medium, but tonight we're shining a light on the diverse aspects of that."

Other attendees who sipped vintage cocktails and noshed on mini gyros and stuffed grape leaves included Wilson Cruz, Ron Glass, Sharon Lawrence and Lisa Vidal. The 65th Primetime Emmy Awards will air live Sept. 22 from the Nokia Theatre with Neil Patrick Harris serving as host.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

It was cocaine, not booze that sent Efron to rehab: reports

THE WORD
Melinda Taub
scene@metronews.ca

Zac Efron's people came clean yesterday and said that he'd recently completed a stint in rehab for alcohol abuse.

However, that burst of honesty may have been a bit of sleight of hand to distract from something they still didn't want to talk about: It was reportedly cocaine, not alcohol

(or not just alcohol), that drove the once squeaky clean High School Musical star to seek treatment.

According to TMZ, Efron's problem was at its worst this spring, when he missed several days of filming on Seth Rogen's Neighbors due to his cocaine abuse.

Uh... so? I mean yeah, cocaine's illegal and a harder drug, but am I the only one surprised that this is such a big deal?

Addiction is addiction, and he's in treatment for whatever it was. Also, everyone in Hollywood seems to do drugs.

Betty White probably does drugs. How else could she be so perky at her age?

Public showers aren't really Paltrow's thing

And here we thought the people who brought flip-flops to wear in the gym shower were high maintenance — but they don't touch Paltrow. The actress reportedly has an assistant go in and wipe down her gym's shower before she uses it.

"She refuses to touch what she calls 'somebody else's shower water,'" a source says.

Miley who? Hemsworth gets lucky in Las Vegas

Liam Hemsworth seems to be taking his split from fiancée Miley Cyrus quite well. The Paranoia actor reportedly hit it off with singer-actress Eiza Gonzalez in Las Vegas after they had "just met," chatting over drinks at a nightclub, according to TMZ.

And back in L.A., Hemsworth was spotted stopping by her apartment to drop off a piece of luggage — and engaged in quite the passionate lip-lock in the parking garage.

My first fashion week

Even the most jaded, poker-faced fashion industry vets started out as bright-eyed youth excited to get a standing room only ticket. We asked a few seasoned insiders to recall the moment of their first entry into fashion's hallowed runway shows.

METRO WORLD NEWS

Lara Mullen, model

"Having been scouted by my model agency Premier two weeks before the shows, I suddenly found myself en-route to New York with a set of polaroids and my auntie Wendy. Many surreal moments followed which certainly got the adrenaline pumping! From balancing in sky scraper heels at Alexander Wang (my very first show), to walking the Prada Milan exclusive to Gisele coming to my rescue at Givenchy, after the strap of my shoe broke!"

Sam McKnight, hair stylist

"The year 1985 in London was all very 'ab fab.' There was a lot of attention on all the club culture and the New Romantics. For Katharine Hamnett's first show we did these kind of flick-up, Miss Money Penny-style wigs. Afterwards Lynne Franks, the PR guru (and my agent at the time) threw Katharine a big party at a warehouse in Covent Garden. Lynne made me go home and get one of the wigs from the show so she could wear it. We couldn't find the headband that went with it so Lynne ended up using a tea towel wrapped around her head. That kind of sums up the energy of the time. It was just about having fun. The whole thing was incredibly creative."

Tom Pecheux, makeup artist

"I was assisting at a Chloé show that featured all the supermodels like Christy, Naomi, Linda and Claudia. They all wanted their makeup done by the lead makeup artist or the other assistant that they already knew. No one wanted me so I went to get a coffee. When I came back Christy Turlington was sitting on my chair. I asked her if she was waiting for someone to do her makeup and she said, 'No, you can do it if you want.' I was so happy but also so afraid. My hands were shaking the entire time. Christy isn't only a beautiful model, she's also a wonderful person."

Dani Stahl, style editor-at-large at NYLON

"Whilst interning at Elle magazine I was writing my senior college paper on Betsey Johnson, so my boss took me into the show. I stood all the way in the back and desperately tried to take pictures. I could barely even see but I thought it was the greatest thing that could ever happen."

You don't have to spend a lot to give your condo that 'wow' factor

CONDO TRENDS
Duncan McAllister
life@metronews.ca

Condo upgrades are a great way to increase the value of your real estate investment and give it that wow-factor — and for surprisingly little money.

With the fall home show coming up in October, this is the time of year to refresh your condo look in time for the holidays.

Sam Beninato is the “wow coordinator” at renewow.com, a Toronto-based end-to-end design and specialty renovations company.

He says there's an entire marketplace of inexpensive upgrades that can add zest to your high-rise home.

What is wow? The wow factor, according to Beninato, is the impact created when you walk into a room — a design that immediately takes your breath away.

“That's where the design element really shines, where you work with somebody who helps you put all the various components together,” he says.

“Individually they may not look like they work, but when you put them together and everything is properly coordinated, it just jumps out and it just wows you.”

Beninato says that people today are looking for value.

“Everything from furniture-styled cabinetry to a glass backsplash with a few inserts of metallic pieces that bring out some of the hardware, to countertops that might have flecks embedded in them.

Homeowners can create a “wow” factor in their kitchen with a glass backsplash or a countertop surface with embedded flecks. DUNCAN MCALLISTER/FOR METRO

... Not overly expensive, but they just look terrific.”

In the bath area, the shower tower is an easy upgrade that turns your bathroom into a spa.

“That's a quick conversion, taking the old faucet out and (putting on a) surface-mounted application, (where) all the components are enclosed behind the cabinet,” says Beninato.

“And (then) you've got a spa effect with rain showers and body sprays. It doesn't require you to get into major plumbing components.”

Remember to check with your condo board before proceeding with upgrades.

And always employ a professional licensed contractor so you don't run afoul of your condo insurance coverage down the road.

Beninato explains that working in a condo can be regimented, so it's best to employ a specialist.

A regular housing contractor may be qualified, but may not understand the complexities of working inside a structured environment.

“When you're working with condos, you either talk to someone who does that as a specialty or you get references from people who already work in the existing building,” says Beninato.

Remember to check with your condo board before proceeding with any upgrades. DUNCAN MCALLISTER/FOR METRO

Legal Matters

Capital gains and real estate

We recently sold our investment condo. When we first purchased, we weren't married and I took a 70 per cent ownership while my now-husband took 30 per cent. What should we be aware of in declaring the profit we've made over the years on this property?

LEGAL MATTERS
Jeffrey Cowan
home@metronews.ca

If you own a property in Canada that is not considered your primary residence, you are subject to capital gains tax on the increase in value of the property that results in a 25 per cent tax on the net increase in value.

Basically, if you bought the property for $200,000, put $10,000 into renovations and $10,000 into disposal costs (such as commission and legals), and you sold for $320,000, then the net increase would be a nice $100,000 profit.

This profit would then be taxed individually based upon your share of ownership. So, you would be paying 25 per cent of $75,000 in taxes while your husband would be responsible for 25 per cent of $30,000.

This is a simplistic example, and there are certainly other tax implications and potential issues for which you should seek the advice of an accountant. Basically, only your principal residence is tax-free from capital gains and you should take heed of the relatively new common law partner filing provisions.

Protect your interiors from ultraviolet rays

Sun protection for the home. UV rays can damage your skin, but they can also fade your furnishings and precious artwork

Sun protection is top-of-mind when we're outdoors, but do you ever wonder if too many ultraviolet rays are getting into your home?

Sally Morse, director of creative services for window treatment manufacturer Hunter Douglas, explains how to avoid the unsightly fading of furnishings and artwork that unfiltered UV rays can bring:

- A must for UV-protection is the right window dressings. Most Hunter Douglas products help to block the majority of UV rays when fully closed and certain products have received high ratings for protection while still allowing light and a view.

These include Silhouette window shadings, which feature soft fabric vanes sus-screened view.

- Did you know red is one of the fastest colours to fade in the sun? The saturated colour is deeply pigmented. As a result, the pigment lightens when exposed to the sun.

If you have paintings with red, be sure to safeguard them. Protect the frame and protect the glass. Use one with UV protection such as museum glass.

Along with its nearly invisible finish, museum glass effectively blocks up to 99 per cent of harmful indoor and outdoor UV light rays.

It also reduces reflection by more than 85 per cent and properly transmits light to enhance colours, brightness and contrast levels, so you can easily maintain these often irreplaceable possessions.

- Look south when it comes to protecting your home. South-facing windows are the most important natural light source in an interior because they receive sunlight year-round that casts a warm, golden glow across the space.

But heat and UV rays resulting from this consistent light will cause the greatest damage. Be sure to have fabrics and window treatments that are UV-stable in this important area of the home.

Make the most of natural sunlight while helping to minimize its damaging effects on both your skin and your home. NEWS CANADA

Keep your basement flood-free

Water damage. These tips can help you protect your home against flooding

Many homeowners are surprised to hear that water damage is the most common insurance claim. Water damage — often in the form of a flooded basement — can come out of nowhere and cause extensive damage to your home.

“Once homeowners understand the most common types of insurance claims, they can take steps to guard against them,” says John Jenner, vice-president of marketing and communications at Western Financial Group.

“Measures might include making sure their home insurance policy covers sewer backup, installing a sump pump, having properly installed drainage systems, or making sure that downspouts are sending water away from their home.”

According to the Insurance Bureau of Canada, there are many causes of flooding, including tree roots growing through cracks in the waterline, overloaded stormwater and sanitary sewer infrastructure, frozen pipes, and vandals blocking lines.

To keep your home safe, follow these guidelines:

Have someone check your house when you're away

If you leave home for more than three days, make sure someone comes to check the premises. A flooded basement, leaky pipe or a broken window can be devastating if it's not discovered and dealt with immediately.

Keep drains clear

It may seem simple, but many homeowners need to be reminded to keep their basement drains clear of obstructions. That means moving large objects such as furniture and making sure the drain is not sitting under a layer of dirt or debris. In older houses, drains may need to be snaked to ensure they can do their job properly.

Install a sump pump and backflow valves

This will greatly reduce the frequency and severity of basement flooding. Backflow valves or plugs can be installed on drains, toilets and other sewer connections to prevent water from entering the home.

Move items that are in flood-prone areas

The 10 minutes spent on inspecting your home for items that are in flood-prone areas could save hours later. Make sure you store important documents and irreplaceable personal items where they will not be damaged.

“It is important for homeowners to go over their insurance policy yearly with a representative,” adds Jenner. “This will make sure you have the coverage you need.”

Fall cleaning. Prep your home for winter — before the first cold snap

Here are some tasks to get out of the way while the weather is still mild so we can cozy up to our fave Cabernet Sauvignon stress-free later.

Service your heating system

As much as 80 per cent of emergency calls answered by heating specialists are the result of improper maintenance. Schedule an appointment soon so you can beat the rush and help avoid a breakdown in the middle of a freeze.

Check and replace filters

Fall is the perfect time to check your furnace filters. Efficient operation distributes heat better and cuts your energy costs. Plus, it's an inexpensive and easy task.

Protect your pipes

Have your plumbing looked at and water lines insulated. Cleaning all lines can help remove clogs. Clogs cause backups, which can freeze and weaken pipes — and potentially cause bursting. Wrap your pipes with insulation designed for plumbing to protect them.

Add insulation

This is one of the lowest-cost options for improving the energy efficiency of your home. The proper amount of insulation depends on the climate you live in. Obviously, the colder the weather, the more you need. Look in your attic: If you see exposed two-by-fours, you are due for more insulation. METRO

Chicken Chili Burritos prove guilt-free fast food does exist

These burritos are still a bit of an indulgence, but ground chicken lightens the filling.

1. In large saucepan, heat 1 tbsp of the oil over medium-high heat; cook chicken, breaking up with spoon, until no longer pink, about 8 minutes. Drain fat from pan. Transfer chicken to bowl and set aside.

2. In same saucepan, heat remaining oil over medium heat; cook onion, garlic, oregano and salt until soft, 3 minutes. Stir in tomato paste; cook 1 minute.

3. Return chicken to pan. Add tomatoes and chili powder; bring to boil. Reduce heat to medium; simmer, stirring occasionally, until thickened, about 15 minutes.

4. Spoon chili onto centre of each tortilla; sprinkle with Cheddar. Fold in bottom and sides; roll up. Place, seam side down, on greased baking sheet.

5. Broil burritos, about 6 inches (15 cm) from heat, until crisp and golden, about 10 minutes

TOSS PASTA MISCONCEPTIONS

Recent fads promoting low-carb diets blast pasta for being unhealthy, but in reality pasta provides the perfect foundation for a nutritious meal. Registered dietitian Andrea Holwegner sets the record straight and offers some insight on the health benefits of pasta:

When eaten in the recommended portions and combined with healthy sides, pasta is part of a healthy diet. It's low in fat, can be a source of B vitamins and each 85g serving has about 300 calories.

Carbohydrates in pasta are turned into glucose, your body's main energy source. These carbohydrates can improve performance when exercising.

Make your meals even healthier by using pastas with added nutrients such as Barilla PLUS® with protein, fibre and omega-3.

Home purchase price. Be wary of hidden fees

LESLEY SCORGIE
For Metro

Homebuyers, prepare yourselves. Experts recommend setting aside approximately two to three per cent of a home's purchase price for "hidden" fees such as:

Realtor fees: If you are selling a home while in the process of buying a new one, and have used a realtor, you will pay a hefty fee for their service. The going rate in Canada is seven per cent on the first $100,000 and 3.5 per cent on the remaining purchase price balance.

Legal: To finalize your home purchase you will have to hire a lawyer/notary to process the deal.

Land transfer tax: This is likely the most expensive aspect of closing costs for a resale home, which is typically less than two per cent of the value of the property. It is a provincial or municipal fee for a change in real estate ownership.

Closing adjustments: Disbursements are property expenses that sellers have paid and need to be reimbursed for such things as utilities, municip-pal property tax, and condo or maintenance fees.

Home inspection: Though home inspections cost as much as $500, they can save major headaches later on. Inspectors render an opinion on the condition of the property and state what needs replacement or repair. If there is something majorly wrong with your property, an inspector should be able to detect it and your realtor can advise on whether you should proceed with the purchase.

Appraisal fees: These typically range between $150 to $300. However, if a mortgage is insured through the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Genworth or Canada Guarantee, the fees are generally waived. Appraisals are a tool to help buyers determine a home's market value.

GST: If you are buying a new home, you will pay GST, and may qualify for a rebate.

Interest adjustments: This is the amount of interest you will need to pay between the date of your closing and first mortgage payment.

Other hidden fees include home and title insurance, utility hook-up costs, an Estoppel certificate (for condominiums), and moving costs.

Stats show that people who set financial goals are far more likely to achieve them compared with those who don't. SYDA PRODUCTIONS/COLOURBOX

Budget rules

Stats show that people who track their money and set financial goals are far more likely to achieve them compared with those who don't.

Homeowners, in particular, need a budget in order to track their expenses, of which there can be dozens each month, and ensure they don't wander financially astray.

Create a new spreadsheet or download a budget tracking tool from your bank's online website, the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Mint.com, or Google documents.

Start by listing all your sources of monthly income — employment, freelance work, royalties, consulting, child support, alimony, government support, bottle returns, etc. Total it up.

Next, list your sources of expenses. But when you do this, put your mandatory expenses up top like retirement savings, mortgage payments, taxes, insurance, condo fees, loan payments, utility bills, home maintenance and groceries. Nice-to-have expenses, such as dinners out with friends, should be listed below. Total up

Increase your income

- If your budget is squeezed each month, increase your income and try the following — get a second job, work extra hours, take on freelance or consulting work, hock your possessions on Kijiji, get a roommate, or rent storage space.

your expenses.

When you subtract your total expenses from your total income, you have your bottom line. If you are in the red, you will need to cut back on nice-to-have expenses and/or increase your income.

As a homeowner, the biggest favour you can do yourself is budget for regular home maintenance like furnace cleaning, and plan for the unexpected like a water heater conking out or sink dripping through the floor. Most experts recommend you have between one and three months worth of salary set aside for "just-in-case" home expense surprises. LESLEY SCORGIE

Lupul eases back onto the ice

NHL pre-season.

Winger makes training camp debut with Leafs after dealing with injury

Joffrey Lupul knows he shouldn't have pushed it.

When the Toronto Maple Leafs winger with a history of lower-back issues felt the area tighten up before training camp started, he acknowledged rest would have been the best approach. When he tried to skate through it, the spasms cost him a week of time on the ice with teammates.

But after Lupul got through his first practice Wednesday, he was confident that mistake won't set him back too much as he tried to prepare for the start of the regular season.

"Obviously not the way I wanted to start the camp, but just happy everything's feeling better now," Lupul said. "We're taking it slow. It's obviously not the same way you'd probably treat an injury in the regular season. It's good that way. I guess time's on my side."

Barring a flare-up of back problems, Lupul is expected to get some pre-season games in before the Leafs visit the Montreal Canadiens on opening night Oct. 1. Starting with

No rushing yet

"At this stage in the season you're taking it slow and make sure you're feeling good for Oct. 1. There's still plenty of time till opening day."

Leafs forward Joffrey Lupul on the cautious approach he is taking to back spasms

Thursday's game at the Ottawa Senators, they have six left, plenty of opportunities.

But Lupul's focus is on getting ready for games that matter. In that regard, Wednesday's practice — which lasted almost two full hours — shed some light on what Toronto's forward lines could look like.

He skated on the left wing with centre Tyler Bozak and right-winger Phil Kessel, a trio that spent limited time together last season because Lupul played just 16 games due to a broken arm and concussion.

James van Riemsdyk and David Clarkson skated together, though Nazem Kadri seems more likely to centre that line than Joe Colborne once things get underway. David Bolland between Mason Raymond and Nikolai Kulemin is also a possibility for the third line.

There were more cameras than normal at Wednesday's Leafs practice.

The Leafs are used to the bright lights and attention that come with playing in Canada's biggest market, but this was something different as HBO's 24/7 was making its first appearance at the team's practice facility, more than three months before the Winter Classic. It was a one-day cameo and a taste of what players and coaches will encounter once daily shooting gets underway in December.

"This is just a precursor to what's coming," coach Randy Carlyle said. "We've had our preliminary discussions about how we're going to deal with it and what we're going to do. In reality, we're not going to see them again, probably, till Dec. 1."

Carlyle doesn't think it'll be a major change for his players, given the attention they already get in Toronto.

Yankees get Wells-earned win over Jays

The Yankees' Robinson Cano follows through on a base hit in front of the Jays' J.P. Arencibia on Wednesday at Rogers Centre. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vernon Wells doubled in two runs to key a four-run eighth inning as the New York Yankees snapped a four-game losing streak on Wednesday with a 4-3 comeback win over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Left-hander David Huff (3-1) allowed one run in 3 2/3 innings of relief to pick up the win. Mariano Rivera — who is retiring at the end of the season — pitched 1 1/3 innings to earn his 44th save of the season.

Toronto (69-82) took a 3-0 lead into the eighth inning on the strength of home runs in the fourth inning by Colby Rasmus and Ryan Goins, the first of his major-league career.

Left-hander J.A. Happ had a strong start for the Blue Jays, striking out seven over seven innings. He was removed for left-hander Aaron Loup after Brendan Ryan led off the eighth with a double to start the Yankees rally.

Curtis Granderson followed up Ryan's hit with a single and right-hander Steve Delabar replaced Loup and struck out Alex Rodriguez. Robinson Cano then singled in a run and Alfonso Soriano doubled in another run.

That set the stage for former Blue Jay Wells to double in two runs and give the Yankees a 4-3 lead.

GSP generous with his fellow fighters

MMA. Welterweight champ kept up-and-comer Ricci on his toes in lead-up to UFC 165

They say iron sharpens iron, which augurs well for Mike Ricci at UFC 165 this weekend.

The 27-year-old lightweight from Montreal spent much of his 10-week training camp for American Myles (Fury) Jury working with UFC welterweight champion Georges St-Pierre.

The two have trained before but the busy St-Pierre was in Montreal for an extended period of time — “which is rare,” according to Ricci — that dovetailed with Ricci’s camp.

“He has been my main sparring partner for this fight,” Ricci said. “I’ve done most of my rounds this training camp with him.”

Not surprisingly, Ricci (9-

“It feels good when you’re working and working and you win small battles here and there against guys like that,” he said. “You know you’ve been improving.”

Light-heavyweight titleholder Jon (Bones) Jones takes on Sweden’s Alexander (The Mauler) Gustafsson in Saturday’s main event at the Air

Canada Centre.

Ricci is one of seven Canadians on the undercard. Francis Carmont, a French middleweight who fights out of Montreal, is on the main card.

Ricci also trains with welterweight Rory (Ares) MacDonald, a close friend, at Montreal’s Tristar Gym.

Like GSP, MacDonald is preparing for a fight at UFC 167 in November. St-Pierre takes on No. 1 contender Johnny (Bigg Rigg) Hendricks in the main event at the MGM Grand Garden Arena in Las Vegas while No. 3 MacDonald faces No. 8 (Ruthless) Robbie Lawler.

Ricci says St-Pierre is more than generous with his time in the gym.

“It’s unreal. If Georges wanted to, he could just do his own thing and then leave,” said Ricci. “But he stays and he puts in work with guys. Not only just me because I have a fight coming up, he’ll work with everybody.”

Browns rebuilding without Richardson

Trent Richardson didn’t fit into the Browns’ plans. They’re pushing forward without him.

Cleveland traded the powerful running back to the Indianapolis Colts on Wednesday, a stunning move just two games into this season and only one year after drafting Richardson in the first round.

Richardson was dealt for a first-round selection in next year’s draft, when the Browns will have two opening-round picks and 10 overall. Cleveland is rebuilding and the team hopes to use those picks — seven in the first four rounds — to help turn around a floundering franchise mired in losing for more than a decade. Speedskater stands up to Russia's anti-gay laws

Calgary athlete strives to be role model for others in LGBT community

Canadian speedskater Anastasia Bucsis, who announced she was gay via Twitter earlier this month, is joining the fight against Russia's anti-gay laws.

She is teaming with Athlete Ally, an advocacy group focused on ending homophobia and transphobia in sports. The organization has denounced the anti-gay laws recently passed by the Russian government and is circulating a petition that urges world leaders to put pressure on the Russians to eliminate the law, which prohibits promotion of "non-traditional" sexual relations.

The law has drawn harsh criticism since it was passed in June with some activists calling for a boycott of next winter's Sochi Olympics.

Bucsis is one of only a handful of openly gay Olympic-calibre winter athletes around the world. While her family knew she was gay, Bucsis came out publicly during Calgary's gay pride parade in early September.

"I'm proud to be from Calgary, I'm proud to be an athlete, and I'm proud to be gay," she tweeted.

On Wednesday, she said taking on an advocacy role

"seems natural" because she is proud of who she is.

"I started speedskating at the age of four, and wasn't aware of any other gay skaters when growing up," she said in a statement. "During my coming out I was very anxious and lonely because I lacked having an out athletic role model. I didn't have any other gay athletic friends, or any mentors that I could readily turn to for advice or support. I am ready to help any athlete out there who is considering coming out of the closet. It's the best decision I ever made."

Horoscopes

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

It is important that you keep your thinking simple today. Don't go confusing people, or yourself, with ideas that are too big to grasp. You are already heading in the right direction.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

You must not compromise your position, no matter how much pressure you may be under from those you work or do business with. Stay calm and simply refuse to budge.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You may be tempted to push ahead with a project you know friends and family are unlikely to agree with, if only to remind them that you are in charge. But is it worth the bother? The full moon says it's not.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You don't have to crack jokes every two minutes to keep others amused. The moon, your ruler, endows you with a wonderful sense of humour but it should be used sparingly.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Do you listen to the part of your mind that urges caution or do you listen to the part that says "take a risk"? Only you can decide but be aware that today's full moon could easily make a fool out of you.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Partners may be critical of what you are doing but if you are smart, you will listen to what they say today because in among all the wrong-headed comments is one that has a grain of truth in it.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

The more you complain about something, the worse it gets, so take the hint and shut up. It's quite possible that someone is being difficult for no other reason than they enjoy the negative way you respond.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Don't give up on something because it isn't progressing as fast as you would like. It would be a shame to waste all the time and effort you have put into it. Come back to it later.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

The full moon warns you could find yourself caught in the middle of someone else's war. There is no right side or wrong side in this dispute, so steer clear. It's not your fight.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

It's unlikely you will achieve much over the next 24 hours, so don't push too hard. Even a Capricorn needs to recharge their batteries once in a while, so plug in to the full moon and fill up on lunar energy.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

No matter how confident a friend sounds, you are advised not to be taken in by their latest big plan, especially if it involves your money in some way. There can be only one loser.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

The moon is full in your sign today, which is good in some ways and not so good in others. You will be more active and ambitious but watch out you don't lose touch with reality. SALLY BROMPTON
